SOMEWHERE IN THE ATLANTIC, Aug. 9 (Delayed) — (INS) — Uncle Sam's Navy means business. That's the warning which can be served to day on any unfriendly navy command which has chosen not to interpret the old gentleman's political and economic moves.

Time was when the ammunition magazines on Navy destroyers carried caps on their anti-aircraft shells. They don't any more.

The caps were taken off the third day the unit of the fleet with which I am "touring" the Atlantic set to sea. It took us two days to assemble our unit from various eastern ports. We more or less idled along during these two days. Then we got down to business.

First, all the anti-aircraft ammunition was taken out of its cabinets, inspected, safety caps removed and fuses set for various explosion distances. Then depth charges, the Y-gun which tosses them over the sides and the pinion rack which allows them to roll off the stern were given a going over.

Test rounds of machine gun ammunition were tried out and found satisfactory as were the guns.

The radio was shut off, single lights arranged for the battle circuit—port-holes were long ago plugged up with shell-resisting steel—and we were ready for whatever the Atlantic might turn up in the way of trouble.

There have been brief periods when it looked as though that trouble might be at hand—submarines detected not

APPEALS FOR AID TO HARVEST FARM CROPS

Those Who Wish Employment
Are Asked To Register
At Office Here

HELP IS NEEDED AT ONCE

The harvesting of crops, one of the important factors of our National Defense, is running into a serious snag in Bucks County, according to a statement issued by the Bucks County Council of Defense, because of the inability of farmers to get labor.

Paid volunteers are needed at once and the Bristol Defense Council urges all who can aid to register at once at the Homes Registration Office, Municipal Building, Bristol.

Already more than 150 farmers in Bucks County have asked for aid to harvest their crops. If aid cannot be obtained the food will go to waste with serious results to the food problem in this country. The demands of the national defense program and the great amounts of food being shipped abroad have made serious inroads upon the reserves.

Mrs. Ernest Love To Leave Hospital Today

Mrs. Ernest Love, mother of the five children who met death in a blaze which destroyed the Love home in Wrightstown Township on August 9th, is scheduled to leave the Doylestown Emergency Hospital today. She will rejoin her husband and only surviving child, Hardy, in a new home at Chain Bridge. The home has been provided by a number of friends who contributed money, house furnishings, rent and all that it takes for a first-class effort at rehabilitation.

Little Hardy will join his parents, after spending some time with friends at Penns Park. He will be given the proper medical care, for the child is still somewhat shocked about the whole affair.

The new Love home contains only three rooms but they are neat and clean, and filled with the necessary things that it takes to start over again.

Until Ernest Love recovers sufficiently to go back to his work, driving a truck, his rent will be paid out of the fund that has come voluntarily from hundreds of friends and sympathizers.

FIVE-ALARM FIRE DOES $1,000,000 DAMAGE

Blaze Sweeps Through Two Square Blocks of Phila.
Early Today

18 FIREMEN ARE HURT

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23—(INS)—A five-alarm fire swept through two square blocks of Philadelphia early today, causing an estimated $1,000,000 damage to industrial plants engaged in defense work and driving several hundred persons from their homes.

Eighteen firemen were injured in battling the blaze.

The fire broke out in the Joseph H. Sykes Lumber Co., located at 19th and Cambria streets and spread rapidly to nearby buildings after causing an estimated $100,000 damage to the lumber yard.

The area swept by the fire was from Cambria to Indiana avenue and from 18th to 20th streets.

The fire spread to the Counties Construction Co., where about $100,000 in motor trucks and equipment went up in flames. Several hundred thousand dollars damage was caused at the warehouse of the King Bedding Co., to which the fire next spread.

Iceland's Peaks Bristle With Guns

(Note—This is the first of a series of reports by Walter Kiernan, INS staff correspondent, who travelled to Iceland with a naval convoy.)

By Walter Kiernan
REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 23—The Laval mountain peaks of this island country bordering on the Arctic Circle bristle with guns, her harbors and fjords are filled with battle craft, her sand-bagged streets with rumbling trucks and marching men of the United States and British armed forces.

There are many American troops here with our convoy in port and their numbers are increasing steadily as convoy after convoy loaded with equipment and men ploughs through the North Atlantic to this capital city.

The British, including Canadians, outnumber the Americans now, but exact figures are difficult to procure.

Bombs have been dropped on Iceland since the British force moved in but there have been no bombs dropped in the many days we have been here.

However, German observation planes come over high in the skies—too high to be reached by anti-aircraft fire. What they see is the transformation of a peaceful land into a seemingly impregnable military and naval base.

The British accomplished much before the Americans arrived. The Americans are accomplishing more.

Through the full 24 hours of each day construction is going forward on barracks, gun emplacements, roads and road barricades.

Iceland's harbor entrances are guarded and tended by battle craft. No ship enters or leaves without permission.

Strikers Give Warning

DETROIT, Aug. 23—Blunt warning that if the city attempts to operate the strike-bound department of street railways 160,000 AFL workers in Wayne County will go out in general strike was served today upon Mayor Edward J. Jeffries.

Meanwhile, the dispute appeared as far from settlement as it was when ordered by the AFL early Wednesday in a jurisdictional battle with the CIO.

Negotiators threw up their hands in apparent disgust after a new peace proposal presented by the mayor was rejected by AFL leaders. The general public rapidly was accustomed itself to getting along without street cars and buses.

GASOLINE SUPPLY HERE CUT 10% BELOW JULY

Dealers Get Five Percent Less
During Last Two Weeks
In August

MAY GET RATION CARDS

Gasoline dealers here now have been advised that their supply will be cut 10% beginning September 1st.

The basis of deliveries to local gas stations is based upon the number of gallons they received during July.

One dealer discussing the situation today said that he will receive 45% from August 16th to August 31st of the gallonage he received during the month of July.

Beginning September 1st he will receive 90% of the number of gallons he handled during July.

Most dealers here are planning to discontinue sales to tourists so that they can take care of their regular customers.

One local dealer stated that in July his sales dropped due to the fact that many of his customers were away and that his future deliveries are to be based on the month when his sales were low, consequently his supply is going to be short. "After my customers return from their vacations then my sales will increase but my supply will be less," he said.

Some dealers have been notified to attend meetings to be held Monday night. Some say ration coupons are being printed.

Only Surviving Drummer Boy Dies at Doylestown

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 23—Bucks county's sole surviving drummer boy of Civil War days—Frank H. Barndt, 90—died yesterday at the Doylestown Emergency Hospital after an illness of three months. He enlisted in the Union Army during the Civil War as a drummer boy when he was 10 or 11 years old. He enlisted in Company G, 45th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, July 1, 1863, serving with the Union forces in the Cumberland Valley during the Battle of Gettysburg. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, Slatington Post. His funeral will be held here tomorrow from the Reed funeral home, Doylestown.

Showing A Good Example

(By "The Stroller")
Borough employees this week started pulling and cutting down weeds which have been adorning some borough property.

The Borough is sending out notices to property owners that weeds must be cleared from all properties and so it was thought that an example set by the Borough itself might be an incentive to others.

If the weeds are cut down along some of the gutters, sidewalks and on vacant lots, the town is going to have a much better appearance.

Protective Association To Meet at Point Pleasant

The ninth annual meeting of the Delaware Valley Protective Association will be held on August 29th, at eight p. m. The place of meeting to be the Point Pleasant Community Fire House.

Annual reports, short talks, and election of officers will be the main program.

Residents of the valley are protesting strongly to the secretary of the association about the condition of the canal and a number of forceful members have stated that they intend to give voice to their disapproval of the putrid condition of the waterway.

Harry Payne Reeves, a recent addition to the artists and property owners of the valley, will punctuate the talk with songs. He is exceptionally good and has been defined by the press of the east as an "Oasis in a day of dry, heavy programs."

FREIGHT HANDLED HERE SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Inbound Carloads More Than Double the Number of One Year Ago

FOUR DRILL CREWS BUSY

The amount of freight being handled by the P. R. R. Co., in and out of the Bristol area has shown a big increase and judging from the activity in and about the freight yards, it is evident that much more freight is being handled here than for some time past.

Four drill crews are required to distribute the cars to the various factories, extending from Andalusia to Morrisville. The in-coming freight is considerably more than the out-going, showing that the raw material is brought in in carload lots while the finished product is being transported out of Bristol in smaller consignments by other means of transportation than rail.

It is estimated that inbound freight has nearly doubled during the past few months, over the tonnage that was handled a year ago.

Several of the industries in this area are engaged in defense work, including Fleetwings, Inc., Pacific Steel Boiler Works, Badenhausen Boiler Works, Rohm & Haas, and Hunter Manufacturing Co. Other industries here are fulfilling sub-contracts for defense materials and are consuming a lot of raw materials.

Material for the construction of the addition to the plant of Fleetwings, Inc., is also helping to swell the total of carload-lots which are being received here.

The sand and gravel companies in the Penn Manor area are making large shipments and trainload after trainload of sand and gravel is leaving this region each day.

Each night carloads of freight are dropped here off passing freight trains while other carloads of freight are attached to trains and hauled out of this area.

The in-bound freight arriving here during the night is classified and the drill crews deliver them to the various plants within a few hours.

JUDGE DAVIS FACES THIRD TRIAL WHEN JURY IS HUNG

Second Time That A Jury Has Reached A Stalemate In Four Months

FIVE FOR ACQUITTAL

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 23—(INS)—J. Warren Davis, retired U. S. Circuit Court judge, and Morgan S. Kaufman, Scranton attorney, today faced a third trial on charges of conspiracy to "sell justice" in the bankruptcy appeals of William Fox, one-time motion picture producer.

Plans to try the two defendants again—possibly in mid-October—were announced by Federal Prosecutor Walter H. Gahagan, Jr., immediately after their second District Court appearance ended in a hung jury.

It was the second such stalemate in the case in four months, the first Davis-Kaufman trial having ended last May when a jury reached a 6-6 deadlocked and was dismissed. The nine men and three women considering evidence this most recent time were unable to agree after 12 hours' deliberation and likewise were discharged. On all four ballots taken their vote stood seven for conviction and five for acquittal.

HIGHER PAYROLL TAXES

Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury Department may have charted the future course of heavier taxation when he announced that he would urge Congress to double or treble social security payroll taxes. Employers and employees now pay 1 per cent each on payrolls and will do so until 1943, when there will be an automatic boost to 2 per cent. Mr. Morgenthau would have employers and employees divvy up 2 or 3 per cent right away.

In the search for heavier taxes a sales levy and a lowering of income tax exemptions have been surveyed with little resultant enthusiasm on the part of the lawmakers. The sales levy is unpopular politically and the income tax in the lower brackets is expensive to collect. But the payroll tax is collected by, and half of it paid by the employer, with little expense to the government. And employers are minority politically. A 2 per cent tax would bring in more than a billion dollars of revenue annually and a 3 per cent tax more than a billion and a half dollars every twelve months.

The policy of using social security taxes for current expenses of the government, placing government bonds in the "fund," has been argued in two Presidential campaigns without the voters calling for a halt. The nation now seems about to see the payroll tax carried to much greater lengths in the financing of a mounting total of government expenditures.

ALONG THE BORDER

Canada and the United States are warrantably proud of their unfortified border, but the many years of international amity patently have not made it possible to eliminate border policing activities, for smuggling and unlawful immigration always offer a threat. But today smuggling is at a minimum, according to Capt. Arch Denner of the United States Customs Patrol. At least, that is the case throughout the district from Lake Champlain to Cape Vincent, which Capt. Denner heads.

Smuggling naturally was most prevalent in prohibition days, and the customs men led danger-filled lives as they dealt with bootleggers who were quick to pull the trigger. The rum-runners were put out of business by repeal, but other smugglers, notably those who dealt in precious stones and narcotics, still flourished.

Captain Denner points out the illicit gem trade has slumped since the war started, and the international transportation of narcotics has been virtually stamped out. The customs men still have plenty to do in co-operating with immigration agents in curbing the smuggling of aliens into this country.

Much of the sheer romance undoubtedly has gone out of border patrol activities, for most of the work today is preventive, rather than detective. Still, the men must remain as fully on their toes as ever, for the professional smuggler is notoriously attuned to any relaxation in vigilance. The customs men may find their work less dime-novelish today, but it is not less important.

The government spent a billion dollars in the first 19 days of the current fiscal year. If a billion dollars a year had been saved in non-defense spending, as Secretary Morgenthau advocated, it would make about as much difference as a snow ball in a hot fire.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

A thrilling prison break, a gun battle in a gang's hideout, and capture of a ruthless racketeer leader tonight Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Get-Away" coming today to the Grand Theatre.

Dan Dalling, Jr., plays Sonny Bledsoe, the menacing gang leader, and Robert Sterling enacts Jeff Crane, the G-man who, disguised as a "tough" convict, gains the gang leader's confidence.

Romance is added by a screen newcomer who is paired with Sterling—Donna Reed, who, as Maria Theresa black, does not know her brother is a gangster and hates the G-man who hunts him.

Comedy is provided by the inebriated old Dr. Glass, played by Charles Winninger, who unwittingly leads Sterling to the gang's secret hideout. This results in the capture of the band which has terrorized Middle West defense industries. Henry O'Neill, Broadway star of many years and veteran of several dozen pictures, plays the prison warden.

J. Walter Ruben, producer of "Flight Command," "Sergeant Madden," "Mamie" and other hits, produced. Edward Buzzell directed.

Like many another popular supposition that doesn't actually work out that way, "Just looking beautiful" does not sum up the job of being a Hollywood glamour girl.

Anne Gwynne, who plays a featured feminine lead opposite Basil Rathbone, Hugh Herbert, Brod Crawford and Bela Lugosi in Universal's "The Black Cat," coming today to the Grand Theatre, provides the proof.

She is skilled in three kinds of dancing, is an expert horsewoman, swimmer, golfer, bowler and tennis player. Anne plays the piano and the violin, and is a trained singer.

Romance is added by a screen new-her so-called "illiterate" speech. Yet Judy's "speech" can be traced to the English of Chaucer and Shakespeare!

SYNOPSIS

On his way to Haverstraw to visit his fiancée, Jane Rider, David Farland prevents a young woman from jumping off a ferry. She entrusts him with an envelope, requesting that he deliver it to the socially prominent Richard Garrison, if she doesn't call for it in a week. The girl's eyes dilate with fear as she sees a certain couple watching them. "I knew he wouldn't play fair!" she exclaims and rushes off, dropping a compact initialed "C.B." and a pamphlet reading "Americans Warning!" On the train, David discovers the envelope is gone! At Haverstraw, he again sees the mysterious woman. Jane and he follow her taxi but it disappears. Stopping at a gas station, they meet Mat Breanu, wealthy Broadwayite, and his friend, Fan Rubley. David drops the compact. Mat Breanu recognizes it. When David refuses to reveal where he got it, Mat tells him to "Give me or Garrison a ring Monday!" What did Breanu know about the whole affair? Shortly after, in a railway station store, David and Jane encounter the couple who had frightened the girl on the boat. A fight ensues but the couple escape. Returning home, David and Jane are met by Mrs. Rider and Kurt Helm, a writer, who lives in a nearby cabin. Kurt is infatuated with Jane and has threatened to win her from David. As the latter goes to take his baggage from the rumble seat, he pulls back in horror. Stuffed into it is the body of the girl David met on the ferry. Breanu drives up with Fan and Dick Garrison, his lawyer, and identifies the body as that of his wife, Carrie. When state troopers arrive, Kurt has disappeared. Later, he warns Jane against David talking too much about Carrie's murder or the propaganda pamphlet. Next morning, Breanu's thoughts go to the quarrel which had broken up his marriage. He had been jealous of a tall, blond man who appeared most attentive to Carrie at a dance. Mat had remembered the man, as a reputed "patrioteer". Fan hysterically bursts into Mat's apartment claiming a blond man had deliberately tried to have her run over. At the Rider home, they are being hounded by curiosity seekers. As Dave and Jane are breakfasting, a dapper young man dashes into the kitchen, Ed Blagden, the trooper, at his heels.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

"Do you know this guy?" Ed grunted, towering above the stranger. "He jumps out of his car—says he's an old friend of the family, and hot-foots it in here."

"A distant cousin," the young man brightly remarked. He held his brown felt disarming in his left hand, his right straying across his belt to the felt helm.

Mrs. Rider set David's scrambled eggs on the table, and turned. "You're mistaken—"

"No you don't, mister!" The tall trooper swooped upon the hat. A candid camera popped from under the crown to the floor. He rammed the small "snapper" in his pocket. "Want me to throw him out, Mrs. Rider?"

"Have a heart!" the young man begged. "All right, I'm not your cousin. I'm a special writer, a free lance. No harm meant." His beguiling glance went to Jane. "I thought a write-up on the family and romance end might help—understand? You're Farland, aren't you?"

"Miss Rider's fiancé? They didn't do you credit in the tabloids."

Mrs. Rider came forward quietly. "I'm sorry, Mr.—"

"Bill Wright," the young man answered.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Wright," Jane's mother said quietly. "We're not that kind of people. All this publicity is most distressing. Our home is free only to our friends. Would you mind—"

Bill Wright knew when he was beaten. "Okay, Mrs. Rider, I'm sorry." He laid his card on the table. "If ever you need a friend—"

David followed him out of the kitchen, as Wright hoped he would. They walked together across the lawn. David said in his impulsive way, "I've always thought you special writers were good pals to have in a case like this. I work at Slagman's—you know the big sports shop on Madison. If I can be of any assistance, believe me I'm as keen to solve this mystery as you are."

Wright climbed in his car, his gaze shrewdly turned on David's frank blue eyes. "Thanks, Mr. Farland," he said. "I'll look you up."

David flushed. "That'll be fine."

"By the way," Wright remarked casually, "Who's the chap living over there?" This was one of the questions he had come to ask. He months ago. Cut up now an' daid! Fan splashed brandy into a wine-glass and drank thirstily. What an escape she'd had!

It all fitted: the well-groomed blond man strolling after her in the Park at a discreet distance so that she couldn't see his face; his peculiar whistle like a signal when she glanced back at him before crossing Fifth. Then, as in response, the car had borne suddenly down upon her. Leaping aside, she caught only a brief glimpse of a crouched figure at the wheel. There was something familiar about the driver's shoulders. She had seen him before.

Her mind skipped back to the old farmhouse in the glare of tragedy last night. Jane and her redheaded jerked a careless thumb toward the trees concealing the log shack on the opposite side of the road.

David answered promptly. "Kurt Helm. I don't really know him. A writer and a sort of hermit, Jane says. He's an odd egg."

"Thanks, Farland. Reseeving you." Bill Wright made off, thoughtfully.

David walked back into the kitchen. Trooper Blagden and Mrs. Rider weren't there. Jane stood by the window. She said slowly, "I never want to see you again, David. You're awful!" With that, she ran from the room.

Fan Rubley swayed against the amber and purple striped portieres leading from the foyer of Breanu's apartment into the living room. Her panicky blue eyes were still fixed on Doremus, whose white coat accentuated his shocked brown face.

"You don't believe someone tried to kill me right outside this building?" She stamped her foot hysterically.

The dark's color drained to ashes. "Yaas, Miz Rubley," he mumbled. "Ah'll go tell Mistuh Br'nu you is heah."

"Where's that brandy I asked for?"

"Yaas, ma'am." Doremus shuffled ahead into the dining room of zebra wood and black leather. Under his breath he kept up a little chant, "No lady drink on Sunday mornin'—no shoo. No lady—"

Dourly, he produced an unopened bottle.

"I'll handle that," Fan said impatiently. "Run along."

Doremus gave her one of his down-the-nose glances, and went to knock on Breanu's door. Po' Miss Carrie, he thought, shaking his head. Sho' a hoodoo on this place boy friend probably didn't even know what they were up against. Even after the inquest tomorrow, they'd never be quite rid of the Carrie Breanu case.

The world was cruel, once you got tangled in any mess, however innocent you were. Fan thought cynically. Your private life was plastered on billboards for all to see. Though the picture faded, some smart guy would come along every ten years or so, and slap a bright new story over the old one.

Would they ever discover who killed Carrie? Ever discover the missing knife?

Her teeth plucked at her under lip. That

"Philadelphia Story" To Open At Yardley With Dora Sayers

"Philadelphia Story," Philip Barry's brilliant comedy of Main Line manners, which gave prestige and glamour to both the stage and screen schedules of a season ago, opens August 25th at Yardley Theatre, Yardley, with lovely Dora Sayers in the Katharine Hepburn role, and Earl Rowe and Wendell Corey as the warring rivals for the charming lady's heart.

Dora Sayers comes to Yardley Theatre direct from the Broadway musical extravaganza, "Lady in the Dark," which is closed during the month of August to allow the star, Gertrude Lawrence, to recuperate from her labors, before re-opening for another season run. Miss Sayers has also been on Broadway recently in "Fabulous Invalid" and "The American Way," both Kaufman and Hart successes. When Philip Barry was casting "Philadelphia Story," a call was issued to all well-known agents for a girl who had beauty, breeding, and acting ability to serve as understudy for the talented and temperamental Miss Hepburn. Dora Sayers was selected from over one hundred fine young actresses, and spent months in this capacity. Miss Sayers came originally from Toronto, Canada.

Lovely Dora Sayers, who plays Tracy Lord in the Yardley Theatre production of "Philadelphia Story," week of August 25th.

Nat Burns, managing director of the Yardley Theatre, will stage the play, and Barry Mansfield, Yardley Theatre's youthful scenic designer, will supply two luxurious settings. Jane Evans, petite dancer, will play the younger sister, Kathryn Cameron, is the social mother. Ainsworth Arnold will portray the rakish father of the clan and Harry Mehaffey is the understanding Uncle Willie. Earl Rowe, handsome leading man, plays the enterprising young reporter, the role that starred Jimmie Stewart in the movie version. Lawrence Hayes as George Kittredge, and Wendell Corey as C. K. Dexter, round out a top flight cast.

Guns of The Navy Ready To Shoot When Necessary

very far away, destroyers not immediately identified—but it didn't break.

That does not mean that vigilance ever is relaxed. Day and night the bridge—eyes and ears of the ship—listens and watches. Day and night, guns are manned. Day—and sometimes night—gunners lovingly tinker with their machinery, adjust sights, stick another smear of grease on a part which must work the first time and smoothly if ever called on.

At sea this unit never pauses. Fuel? Pull up beside a ship with plenty to spare, run alongside while both are doing eight knots an hour, shoot a line aboard and pull the feed hose over. Try filling your gas tank from a tank truck on a rocky road with soft shoulders in a rainstorm while you both travel at nine miles an hour and you'll get the idea.

Supplies? Get 'em the same way if they run short. These boys even sling personnel from ship to ship in a bosun's chair while bounding over the briny.

Communication is by blinker light and semaphore and enough messages are handled by the signal men on any ship to give any telegraph office a good rating with its headquarters.

Action, speed is the essence of efficiency in this unit. Perhaps the Navy knew it all the time. Perhaps it has learned its lesson from the power which taught the world what modern warfare is.

The United States Navy, if this unit is a prime example, can fight that kind of war if ever called upon. It has dash and daring but more than that it has cold, hard efficiency which sweeps softie-ple methods aside and presses on the accomplishment of the task at hand and even if somebody's chow is delayed or their hands get redder than usual.

When the senior command of this unit orders a thing done it is done and the flags read "well done" for all the unit to see. Let someone slip be the skipper or third class seaman and the flags read "not well done."

That also is for all the unit to read and reflect on and gear up its efficiency another notch.

Two Men Hurt in Explosion
Paulsboro, N. J., Aug. 23—Five rapid explosions today shattered the high octane plant of the Socony Vacuum Oil Co. refinery here where millions of gallons of top-grade gasoline are being manufactured for the nation's armed forces and for shipment abroad.

Two men were injured seriously and several others believed hurt. Company officials, however, declined to make known details of cause or extent of the blast which shook Paulsboro and the neighboring countryside.

The explosions apparently occurred in the stabilizer building of the Houdry process plant whose capacity is 63,000,000 gallons of high octane fuel annually.

The first blast at 5:45 a. m. "woke up the whole town" and was followed by a second explosion of gun-shot sharpness. Three muffled reports occurred in the next few minutes.

Roosevelt To Confer With Duke of Kent

Hyde Park, Aug. 23—President Roosevelt, against a background of his historic conference with Prime Minister Churchill, will confer late today with the Duke of Kent, younger brother of King George VI.

Kent, who has been making an extensive Canadian defense tour, will be house guest of the Roosevelts for the week-end and is to accompany the President to Washington, Sunday night.

The Duke will arrive at LaGuardia Field, New York, by plane, and motor directly to Hyde Park. Mr. Roosevelt has asserted the conference will be without international significance, but it appeared likely the meeting would at least advance the mutual understanding of Great Britain and the United States.

a new trial." Gahagan told Judge Hugh D. McLellan, of Boston, specially presiding, after the jurors had filed out. "I would like to confer with my associates for a date to be asked."

"You may have the necessary time," Judge McLellan replied.

Gahagan indicated it will be several days before he is ready to file his motion. Meantime, both defendants were continued in $5,000 bail.

Davis, 74, is accused of receiving $27,500 in unsecured loans from Fox in 1936 when the ex-movie magnate's bankruptcy cases were before the Circuit Court. Fox, who has pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges, testified as a government witness to handing $12,500 personally to Davis and transferring $15,000 to the jurist through Kaufman.

that under a recent act of the Legislature the tenure status of teachers going into the U. S. service is protected. Teachers returning to their positions after the "duration" are entitled to the prescribed increments in salary, and seniority status. The school district is compelled to pay into the teachers' retirement fund the full amount as if paid by the teacher. The school district on request will have to pay to dependents of teachers in the service the difference between the salary paid a substitute teacher and what would be paid to the teacher now in the service, with certain limitations. Positions must be held open for teachers entering the service until they are discharged.

The meeting was presided over by Bradley Ardrey, vice-president of the Board, in the absence of President Doron Green.

hours of eight a. m. and 10 p. m., Monday through Thursday.

A new request for larger and more equipment has been put through to Washington in the amount of $43,000 for Bristol Borough. This equipment includes $34,838 for machine shop, $6,579 for arch welding and $1,500 for wood shop, and the school expects to receive a large amount of this request, which will enable enlargement of all shops and give the boys in the community as good, or better training than most places in the State.

"We do not believe that the parents in the community fully realize the advantages of this training at present. Most private schools would charge from $300 to $500 for similar training while this costs your boy nothing," it is stated.

More Motorists Now Dimming Headlights

HARRISBURG, Aug. 23—(INS)—According to headquarters of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, automobile headlighting and dimming courtesy in Pennsylvania has improved greatly throughout the last year. An actual check on the highways of the State indicates that not over one car in 20 had glaring headlights, whereas one year ago the ratio was one in eight. This condition has been brought about by improved inspection methods, and a steady campaign of education.

Four thousand seven hundred and sixty-nine cars were stopped on the highways during the month of July because of defective lighting equipment. Out of this number only three resulted in arrest. In the others, corrections were directed and complied with.

In reporting on unsafe tires the Motor Police during the month of July warned 1,641 motorists to replace unlawful tires on their automobiles. This brought to 9,920 the number of motor vehicles found to be operated on public highways with unsafe tire equipment during the first seven months of the year. A total of four arrests were made during this period as a result of automobile owners failing to heed the police warning to obtain new tire equipment.

The operation of a motor vehicle with defective tires is an exceedingly dangerous practice that becomes increasingly so during the summer months when tire stress increases greatly by reason of expansion caused by intense heat. Motorists are cautioned to protect their safety by obtaining new automobile tires when needed.

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.
